

Bring Susan to Your School!

The challenges and pressures faced by educators have never been greater than they are today. If you're investing in professional development, you want more than simple platitudes and empty inspiration. Susan Fitzell is a dynamic, nationally recognized presenter, author and educational consultant offering solutions for:

- Teaching struggling learners through gifted and high achieving students in the same classroom
- Motivating and reaching students with special needs
- Implementing Response to Intervention at the secondary level
- Increasing English language skills for students with limited English proficiency
- Pulling together co-teaching teams and helping paraprofessionals and teachers work together
- Behavioral and anger management issues
- Preventing bullying, including cyberbullying

Susan's work builds caring, inclusive school communities that support success for students and teachers. Her programs provide concrete, research-based strategies that will provide positive, measurable results.

"The information was extremely useful and relevant. In my years as director of special education programs I've never held a training with as much benefit for the wide range of skills and knowledge of a typical group of educators. From newly hired staff fresh out of college to highly qualified teachers with decades of experience, all the feedback was overwhelmingly positive."

—Timothy O'Gan, Director of Special Education Programs, Johnson County School District #1

Susan's intensive intervention and coaching services over the last three years have had a tremendous impact on student achievement in our school. With Susan's instructional help and consistent classroom coaching support, we were able to make our adequate yearly progress (A.Y.P.) target goals in reading and math for the first time in the history of our school.

—Brent Williams, Principal, Lenoir County Public Schools

"She engaged professional staff and para-educators equally well by presenting material that was relevant to each employee's everyday work life."

—Dean S. T. Cascadden, Superintendent, Bow School District
